Problem Statement

College students need a way to be more time efficient with school work and social activities

Details:

A big problem for college students is managing their time. They are told about having so much free time in college but once they get there it feels like they ever have time for anything. With going to social events and forgetting about a project due college students grades start to slip. These 18 year old freshmen are used to being on a highschool schedule. Going to school then homework and then they have social activities on the weekends. There needs to be a system that helps them transition from high school to college time management.
